Optional iOS Image

What is this for?

Apple is releasing an update for iOS that can cause images to be loaded prior to a subscriber's actual open time. This may affect the accuracy of some images and therefore we are giving all clients an option to show an alternative image, or 1x1 transparent pixel, if they'd like.

This will not affect all image types, but we do anticipate timers and rules based on dates to be not as accurate on iOS. While some clients may not have an issue with timers being slightly off, this option will give those that do another option.

What are my options?

You can continue to show any NiftyImages that you have created as most will not be affected, or you can choose to display a Backup Image or Transparent Pixel. Images that don't require up to the minute updates will still show for all subscribers, including Personalized Images, Personalized Charts, Rule Set images not using dates, images using Data Sources that aren't showing up-to-the-second data and A/B Split tests.

For images that update from an API we now offer a TimeStamp merge tag layer that can be used in your images. This can ensure that the subscribers know when the most recent data for this image was updated.

- Display my NiftyImage to all opens

- Show a Transparent Pixel
